

- “Physical activity” has different intensities – Light, Moderate, and Vigorous. Light activity might be gardening; Moderate activity might include walking the dog, Vigorous physical activity might be a hockey game or a race. Physical activity doesn’t always have to be vigorous!
- Most high school students get to school by either car or bus – how much bus money would you save if you walked or biked to school instead?
- If more people walked, cycled or inline skated to school or work every day, we would increase our physical activity levels and reduce greenhouse emissions<sup>ii</sup>. Be active and be green!
- The Aboriginal Sport Circle is Canada’s national voice for Aboriginal sport. They are committed to the development of Aboriginal athletes and coaches – why not check them out today?

- Have you ever thought of coaching a local children’s team? Many community sport programs welcome high school students to participate in coaching their youngest teams – check it out! You may even get credit for volunteering.
- Physical activity doesn’t have to be in organized structured sports or activities. Getting outside and being active is great physical activity - it doesn’t have to have rules or uniforms<sup>iii</sup>! Check out www.participation.com/get-moving/tips/ for great ideas!
- Wearing a pedometer will help you keep track of your own daily physical activity – you should be aiming for 16,500 steps every day!<sup>iv</sup>
- Canadian Special Olympics athletes compete in both summer and winter sports across Canada – go to www.specialolympics.ca to find out more about a sport or club near you!
- “Bridging the Gap” is a program through the Ontario Wheelchair Sports Association that introduces wheelchair sports (rugby, basketball, tennis, athletics) to Canadian youth. For more information, go to www.ontwheelchairsports.org
